Dear Sir or Madam,

RE: The importance of socioeconomic risk factors and sanitation in the epidemiology of soil-transmitted helminths in Bihar State, India (working title)

Public Library of Science (PLoS)

We are writing to confirm that following an enquiry to the AHSC Joint Research Office (JRO) for Imperial College London and Imperial College Healthcare NHS Trust, we advised the Partnership for Child Development (PCD), part of Department of Infectious Disease Epidemiology of Imperial College London, that the above mentioned paper is not considered research, and therefore does not require an ethical opinion.

The JRO reviewed the details of the above mentioned paper (as laid out in the annex of this letter), which included the analysis and publication of the Indian State Government of Bihar's data on worm prevalence in school-children, with the Head of Regulatory Compliance for the College, Gary Roper. We provide this letter as evidence of ethical consideration by PCD and confirmation of our advice.

Please direct any research compliance enquiries for this paper to Ms Lucy Parker, Research Governance Manager, JRO at the address above.

Yours sincerely
