
Downloaded from: http://researchonline.lshtm.ac.uk/4650223/

DOI:

Usage Guidelines:

Please refer to usage guidelines at http://researchonline.lshtm.ac.uk/policies.html or alternatively contact researchonline@lshtm.ac.uk.

Available under license: http://creativecommons.org/licenses/by-nc-nd/2.5/
Does women’s paid work reduce spouse abuse?
Insights from Tanzania

Seema Vyas, Jessie Mbwambo, Lori Heise
23rd IAFFE Annual Conference
June 27-29th 2014
Ghana

Research jointly supported by the ESRC and DFID
Partner violence and women’s economic empowerment

- Economic strengthening a strategy for women's empowerment
- Some settings women's employment protective against partner violence
- BUT increased women's risk of partner violence in other settings
- Theory also provides conflicting views
Economic theory

- Women in paid work should be less vulnerable to abuse

- Theory emphasis is on the control over resources:
  - Men and women cooperate in joint ventures
  - Bargaining power a function of resource endowment
  - And on viable alternatives “fallback” position
Feminist contribution

- Women in paid work may be at higher risk of abuse
- Feminist theory emphasis is on contextual factors, gender ideologies and cultural expectations:
  - Challenges to the distribution of power
  - Women unable to fulfill existing domestic duties
  - Men unable to fulfill role as household breadwinner
Contested development study

- Semi-structured interviews with women market traders
  - 10 in Dar es Salaam and
  - 10 in Mbeya
- January-March 2009
Study inquiry

- Factors that led women to seek paid work
- Women’s control over income
- Bargaining power (household and sexual decision making)
- Experiences of intimate partner violence
Static decision making power

- Paid work did not necessarily translate into greater household decision making or sexual empowerment
- Ability to leave a violent relationship dependent on family support
- Women’s earnings mitigated one source of conflict — negotiating over money
Positive things about working

- Women’s earnings not appropriated
- Increased sense of confidence and satisfaction
- Women’s greater aspirations for their children
Partner violence: a unitary phenomena?

- Experiences of partner violence:
  - Moderate physical: Infrequent incidents of physical violence, no injury
  - Physical & sexual: Physical violence occasionally accompanied by sexual coercion
  - Severe abuse: Frequent beatings, debilitating injuries and psychological impact

- There may be distinct “types” of partner violence that differ in the level of control; motivation; impact and etiology
Multifaceted conflict arena?

- Major sources of conflict:
  - Negotiating over money
  - Partner problematic alcohol use
  - Partner relationships with other women
- Factors associated with women’s risk of partner violence do not operate in isolation

Men have money for alcohol and other women but not for their children.
Further enquiry

- Short and long term impacts of women’s changing economic circumstances
- Implications of paid work from different sectors on partner violence
- Macro level research on women’s labour force participation and partner violence
Thank you very much!

seema.vyas.ac@gmail.com